TENDERING TO INCO REMAINS BEST CHOICE FOR FALCONBRIDGE SHAREHOLDERS

Toronto, July 26, 2006 Inco Limited (NYSE, TSX: N) today outlined why the Inco- Falconbridge combination remains clearly the best alternative for Falconbridge shareholders.

Falconbridge shareholders need to consider three things very carefully the tremendous earnings and cash flow potential of the New Inco, the synergy opportunities we have identified, and the excellent outlook for sustained high metals prices in nickel and copper, said Inco Chairman and CEO Scott Hand. Then they have to ask themselves if they re prepared to give all that away to Xstrata by accepting their lower cash offer.

Inco has announced net earnings for the second quarter of 2006 of $472 million and indicated that at current metals prices, its second half profits could exceed $1.6 billion.

Falconbridge Limited (NYSE, TSX: FAL) has announced second quarter net earnings of $728 million.

Inco and Falconbridge have identified $550 million in synergies with a net present value of $3.5 billion that will significantly add to the performance potential of the New Inco.

Inco s cash and share offer provides a premium of 3 per cent over the Xstrata offer.

Today Phelps Dodge announced second quarter earnings of $472 million and forecast third quarter cash flow of $1.5 billion.

Nickel and copper continue to trade at near record levels and are the two metals with the best supply demand fundamentals going forward both for the near and long term.

Phelps Dodge Inco will be a global nickel copper powerhouse with an even greater potential to capitalize on strong nickel and copper markets going forward.

Falconbridge shareholders need to understand that this is it this is their chance to make this great nickel copper company a reality and they need to act and tender now to the Inco offer, which expires at midnight (Vancouver time) on Thursday, July 27, 2006, Mr. Hand said.
