Item 8.01 Other Events.

On August 30, 2005, the U.S. Tax Court issued its ruling in favor of the Company on all matters not previously settled regarding fiscal years 1996 through 1999. The substantive issue, tried in July 2004, was whether the value of compensatory stock options must be included in the Company's cost sharing agreement with the Company's Irish affiliate. The Court found that the Company's cost sharing agreement met the arm's-length standard of the IRS Tax Regulations and that unrelated parties would not share the spread or grant date value of compensatory stock options. The Court further found that the regulations applicable to the tax years at issue did not require the Company to include the value of compensatory stock options in its cost sharing agreements. Accordingly, the Company was not liable for any tax, penalties or interest associated with the IRS assertions.

The Company is in the process of evaluating the full accounting implications of this decision on tax years 1996-1999 and all subsequent impacted years. Based upon our initial analysis, the Company expects that there will be a favorable impact of $7 to $9 million to net income for reversal of prior reserves related to this issue. In addition, there could be additional positive impact of $3 to $4 million for interest income, net of tax resulting from a refund due to the Company.

It is unknown at this time whether the IRS will seek reconsideration or appeal the ruling. Whether the IRS does so could have future financial implications.
