On March 6, 2013, RP Management, LLC issued the following announcement:

ROYALTY PHARMA STATEMENT REGARDING ELAN PROPOSAL

This announcement does not constitute an announcement of a firm intention to make an offer under the Irish Takeover Rules

New York, NY March 6, 2013

RP Management, LLC (Royalty Pharma) remains committed to acquiring Elan on the terms set out in the Proposal Announcement of February 25, 2013, but continues to be disappointed that the Board of Elan has not engaged in discussions. Royalty Pharma is ready and able to move quickly to implement an offer and believes that it will be able to complete due diligence in 20 days.

Royalty Pharma announces today that it is meeting with a number of Elan Shareholders to discuss the Proposal. For the purposes of these meetings, Royalty Pharma has produced a presentation which it is posting today on its website, and is making this announcement to conform with the disclosure and other requirements of the Irish Takeover Rules.

The presentation may be found at www.royaltypharma.com/index.php/proposedofferforelan.

Key messages

Royalty Pharma believes that:

the Proposal would, if completed, allow Elan Shareholders to immediately receive full value for their Elan Stock in cash;

the Proposal presents a compelling financial proposition for Elan Shareholders based on a variety of different premia and multiple calculations;

there are significant execution risks associated with Elan s new acquisition strategy;

Elan s current senior management team lacks a successful track record in making acquisitions or in-licensing late stage products at Elan;

the Proposal attributes a higher value to the Tysabri Royalty than is implied by the terms of the Tysabri Transaction;

following the completion of the Tysabri Transaction, Elan will have little or no strategic value and the field of likely acquirers of Elan has narrowed sharply; and the Board of Elan s refusal to engage with Royalty Pharma is depriving Elan Shareholders of the opportunity to decide on the merits of the Proposal.

Royalty Pharma is ready and able to move quickly

Royalty Pharma believes that the pre-conditions to its Proposal, as stated in full in the Proposal Announcement, can easily be satisfied or waived once it is given access to due diligence. The pre-conditions are limited to the completion of customary due diligence, the completion of the Tysabri Transaction, no other transactions being undertaken by Elan (including acquisitions or buybacks) and other customary conditions.

Royalty Pharma is ready to move quickly and has the required financial strength to complete the Possible Offer, with more than US$1.1 billion of cash on hand and highly confident letters from its financing banks, J.P. Morgan and BofA Merrill Lynch. Upon satisfactory completion of Royalty Pharma's due diligence the financing banks will provide committed financing sufficient to satisfy the consideration payable.

Royalty Pharma has a strong track record of raising capital in the debt and equity markets, including investment grade debt. Appendix III contains details of selected recent debt and equity fundraisings undertaken by Royalty Pharma.

Royalty Pharma believes that it will be able to complete its required due diligence within 20 days of being provided the necessary access to due diligence materials. Accordingly, Royalty Pharma believes Elan Shareholders should urge the Board of Elan to engage with Royalty Pharma and grant the required access to allow an offer to be pursued expeditiously.

Royalty Pharma's Proposal delivers full value in cash for Elan Stock today

Royalty Pharma believes that the Proposal offers Elan Shareholders a compelling financial alternative that will allow them to realize full value for their Elan Stock in cash immediately and eliminate the execution risk associated with Elan's acquisition strategy.

In the event that the Possible Offer were successfully made, Elan Shareholders, as opposed to Elan, would be able to reinvest any cash proceeds in other pharmaceutical companies without paying the control premium which Elan may need to pay to acquire control of such companies.

In the event that the Possible Offer is not made, Elan Shareholders will have limited control over what assets Elan might acquire (as shareholder approval may not be required). Royalty Pharma believes that the risks associated with Elan's future acquisition strategy, and the impact of this strategy on earnings visibility, are substantial.

Furthermore, unlike the unique dividend policy announced by Elan on March 4, 2013 whereby Elan Shareholders receive only 20 percent of the Tysabri Royalty over time, the Proposal would allow Elan Shareholders to receive what Royalty Pharma believes is full value for their Elan Stock immediately upon the completion of an offer.

Royalty Pharma's perspective on the assets, attributes and liabilities of Elan today is contained below.

Elan's hard assets

Royalty Pharma believes that substantially all of Elan's assets, following the completion of the Tysabri Transaction, will consist only of net cash of US$3.1 billion¹ or US$5.1 per Elan Stock² (to which Royalty Pharma does not ascribe a premium) and the Tysabri Royalty, of which Biogen now has full operating control.

² Per Elan stock numbers in this section are based on 602.0 million fully diluted shares outstanding at the Proposal Price, as calculated in Appendix VI.

Royalty Pharma believes that the Tysabri Royalty is a financial rather than strategic asset and should therefore be valued on the basis of financial metrics (i.e. intrinsic value). As described elsewhere in this announcement, Royalty Pharma has prepared an illustrative calculation, which assumes that the Disposed Tysabri Percentage is between 46 percent and 54 percent. Using the mid-point of the Disposed Tysabri Percentage Range would indicate that the Tysabri Transaction ascribed a value of US$3.25 billion (US$5.4 per Elan Stock) to the residual Tysabri Royalty.

Royalty Pharma further believes that the Proposal ascribes significant value to the portion of the Tysabri Royalty that extends beyond the drug's remaining exclusivity period (which ends in 2020³). This statement is based on Royalty Pharma's analysis of publicly available forecasts for Tysabri revenue over the period of the drug's remaining exclusivity period.

Elan's other financial attributes

Royalty Pharma believes that Elan's other financial attributes are limited to the available tax losses created by net operating losses and Elan's Irish tax domicile.

Royalty Pharma values the tax losses at a maximum of US$187.5 million (US$0.3 per Elan Stock). This is calculated by multiplying the Irish corporate tax rate of 12.5 percent by the US$1.5 billion of net operating losses that Elan has suggested are available to it⁴. This calculation is based on the scenario that the net operating losses are used in full and are all used upfront. If in fact the net operating losses are used over time, the real net present value of the tax benefit from these net operating losses would be lower. Royalty Pharma proposes, as part of its due diligence, to examine whether the tax benefit from these net operating losses would be useable by Royalty Pharma or any other future acquiror.

Royalty Pharma believes that Elan's Irish tax domicile does not differentiate Elan from other pharmaceutical companies in low-tax jurisdictions (by way of example: Jazz and Valeant), nor does it follow that the acquisition by an Irish holding company of a foreign target in a higher tax jurisdiction such as the U.S. would of itself result in a material reduction in the target's effective tax rate.

Offsets

Royalty Pharma believes that the value ascribable to Elan's assets and financial attributes will be offset at least in part by the negative value of the US$170-190 million⁵ (US$0.3 per Elan Stock) annual operating expenses in 2013 that Elan maintains (which include expenses associated with ELND005). There are also US$60-80 million of remaining expenses associated with bapineuzumab in 2013⁶ (Royalty Pharma believes there to be no apparent value in excess of the investment requirement).

³ 2020 being the time at which the primary U.S. patent relating to Tysabri and covering the relevant humanized antibody expires. Extracted from Elan's 20-F SEC filing on February 12, 2013 for the financial year ended December 31, 2012.

⁴ Referenced in CallStreet transcript of the Tysabri Conference Call on February 6, 2013.

⁵ On the basis of Elan's announcement of its results for the 2012 financial year made on February 6, 2013.

⁶ US$60-80 million expected this year, with US$30 million already funded in January 2013.

Other considerations

As described elsewhere in this announcement, Royalty Pharma believes that there is a very real possibility that Elan could destroy value through its acquisition strategy.

A compelling financial proposition

The Proposal Price represents a substantial premium to comparable companies' trading multiples

The Proposal Price represents:

a Proposal Enterprise Value for Elan equal to 12.2x 2015E Broker Projected EBITDA (the median 2015E projected EBITDA multiple for the Specialty Pharma Companies is 5.9x⁷, and for the Large Cap Biotech Companies is 9.1x);

a Proposal Price equal to 30.6x 2015E Broker Projected Earnings Per Share (the median 2015E projected earnings per share multiple for the Specialty Pharma Companies is 8.7x, and for the Large Cap Biotech Companies is 11.3x); and a Proposal Enterprise Value for Elan equal to 8.3x 2015E Broker Projected Revenue (the median 2015E projected revenue multiple for the Specialty Pharma Companies is 2.4x and for the Large Cap Biotech Companies is 4.8x).

Royalty Pharma believes that it is useful to compare Elan's trading multiples with the trading multiples of other companies with acquisition-led business models similar to Elan's proposed strategy.

For example, Royalty Pharma considers Valeant and Jazz to be successful specialty pharmaceutical companies whose business models include significant growth through acquisitions. As with Elan, these companies also have non-US tax domiciles. In contrast to Elan, Royalty Pharma believes that these companies have established operations enabling them to derive synergies from transactions.

Valeant is trading on a 8.7x 2015E projected earnings per share multiple⁸ and Jazz is trading on a 6.8x 2015E projected earnings per share multiple⁹. The Proposal Price represents 30.6x Elan's 2015E Broker Projected Earnings Per Share. Were the Valeant or Jazz multiples referenced above to be applied to Elan's 2015E Broker Projected Earnings Per Share, they would imply a share price of US$3.15 and US$2.44 respectively. Equally, if the Proposal Price were divided by the Valeant or Jazz multiples referenced above respectively, the resulting implied earnings per share would be US$1.26 or US$1.62 respectively, both materially higher than Elan's 2015E Broker Projected Earnings Per Share of US$0.36.

⁷ All multiples referenced in this section are as at February 22, 2013, being the last trading day prior to the Proposal Announcement.

⁸ Based on I/B/E/S consensus for earnings per share forecasts and share prices both downloaded from FactSet on 22-Feb-2013.

⁹ Based on I/B/E/S consensus for earnings per share forecasts and share prices both downloaded from FactSet on 22-Feb-2013.

Were Elan to distribute its net cash and the share price declined proportionally, the implied 2015E earnings per share multiple at the Proposal Price would be 16.7x¹⁰, still materially above the corresponding multiples of Jazz or Valeant.

Elan management's strategy and the risks associated with it

Royalty Pharma believes that there are a number of significant risks associated with Elan's new business plan, many of which were identified in the Proposal Announcement. In particular, Royalty Pharma believes that each new investment made by Elan will be scrutinized to ascertain near-term value creation potential, thereby increasing the volatility in Elan Stock.

Royalty Pharma believes that these risks were demonstrated by Elan's February 6, 2013 announcement of the Tysabri Transaction, as well as by the change of heart evident in Elan's recent statements, following the receipt of Royalty Pharma's Proposal.

The day of the announcement of the Tysabri Transaction

On February 6, 2013, the day of the announcement of the Tysabri Transaction, Royalty Pharma believes that Elan revealed its true colors during the Tysabri Conference Call¹¹.

Elan stated that it would use a majority of the Tysabri Consideration for acquisitions in statements which Royalty Pharma believes were unclear and unfocused. Elan's statements regarding returning cash to shareholders were also vague and reflected Elan's lack of focus on enhancing shareholder value. In general, Royalty Pharma believes that Elan expressed little concern for the views of Elan Shareholders during the Tysabri Conference Call, which included the following statements¹²:

But to emphasize, the US$3.25 billion is a lot of money. There is a lot of assets out there. Our goal as we sit here today is that the majority of that capital over time should be put into businesses, again, in a balanced way. But again, some portion of it, given that we brought forward the value, will be returned to shareholders at the right time and post-close and as we sequence it against other transactions.

As far as usage of this capital upon close, they include, but are not limited to, therapeutic opportunities across broad therapies. We are basically agnostic to therapeutic focus.

we are somewhat agnostic to different geographies they all hold some appeal, depending on what part of the geography you're interested in we are not particularly interested in large markets, large indications of primary care, but large markets in smaller indications would be attractive and vice versa.

And we still do like some very specific, unique science things.

¹⁰ Calculation assumes that US$5 is distributed to each Elan Shareholder (which implies a total cash distribution of US$3.0 billion based on 602.0 million fully diluted shares in issue at the Proposal Price) and that there is no impact of cash distribution on 2015E Broker Projected Earnings Per Share.

¹¹ Sourced from CallStreet transcript of the Tysabri Conference Call.

¹² Royalty Pharma has underscored certain portions of the passages for emphasis.

At the right time and in the right manner, we would intend to provide some portion of this capital back to shareholders over time.

we are not going to satisfy all investors on every category. So anyway, everyone can vote with their feet. The Elan Stock price fell by approximately 10 percent on the day of the Tysabri Conference Call.

Elan's announcements since its receipt of Royalty Pharma's Proposal

Royalty Pharma believes that Elan has changed its messages since receiving Royalty Pharma's Proposal, particularly with regard to shareholder returns.

Having previously said that shareholders can vote with their feet, on February 22, 2013 Elan announced a US$1 billion share repurchase programme and noted that "We greatly value our shareholder relationships and the access to equity capital these relationships give us and we appreciate the time horizon of many of our long term holders. We will continue to work on ways to unlock incremental value to their direct benefit." Notably, Elan failed to disclose that it had received Royalty Pharma's Proposal.

On February 25, 2013, after Royalty Pharma released the Proposal Announcement, Elan stated publicly that it would consider any credible proposal, implying that Royalty Pharma's Proposal was not credible.

On March 4, 2013, Elan announced a plan to distribute 20 percent of the Tysabri Royalty to shareholders through dividends. Deutsche Bank and RBC Capital Markets have calculated that this would imply a dividend yield of only 1-2 percent¹³ in the short term, and this announcement provides no further clarity about Elan's plans for the remaining 80 percent of the Tysabri Royalty. The Elan CEO made a number of remarks in an interview¹⁴ on that day that rejected entertaining any discussions with Royalty Pharma, stating that:

We're not in any discussions with [Royalty Pharma] at all on any topic and we don't see any need to have those discussions.

We don't see Royalty Pharma as a credible counterparty to have any strategic discussions with. We're not looking for any price. Accordingly, Royalty Pharma believes that Elan is still not focused on maximising shareholder value, and that Elan Shareholders should treat Elan's recent change of heart regarding returning cash to Elan Shareholders with scepticism.

The reaction of analysts to the Tysabri Transaction

Following the announcement of the Tysabri Transaction, four analysts (AlphaValue, Deutsche Bank, RBC Capital Markets, and UBS) cut their ratings on the Elan Stock and nine analysts (AlphaValue, Berenberg Bank, Deutsche Bank, Exane BNP Paribas, Morgan Stanley, RBC Capital Markets, Spin-Off Research, Standard & Poor's and UBS) lowered their price targets¹⁵. At the time of the Proposal Announcement, a significant majority of analysts had price targets at or below the Proposal Price.

A majority of analysts that have released comments on the Tysabri Transaction included at least some commentary expressing uncertainty on Elan's acquisition strategy or track record¹⁶.

Royalty Pharma also believes that the Elan Stock price prior to the Proposal Announcement was, to an extent, inflated by takeover speculation, as supported by the fact that a number of analysts also included at least some commentary mentioning the possibility of Elan being a potential acquisition target¹⁷.

Higher value attributed to the Tysabri Royalty than that implied by the Tysabri Transaction

Royalty Pharma believes that it is offering Elan Shareholders a value for the Tysabri Royalty that is higher than the value implied by the Tysabri Transaction. This is despite the fact that Royalty Pharma would not gain control of Tysabri through an acquisition of Elan, and the fact that the tiered Tysabri Royalty structure allocates more value to Biogen on the lower risk cash flows accruing from Tysabri (the first US$2 billion of annual sales from the drug) and makes the value accruing to Elan more dependent on the higher risk cash flows (the incremental annual sales from the drug above US$2 billion).

The Tysabri Transaction, in which Elan was a willing seller, set an implied value on the residual Tysabri Royalty held by Elan. The implied value of the residual Tysabri Royalty held by Elan depends on the percentage of Elan's economic interest in Tysabri that was acquired by Biogen in the Tysabri Transaction (the Disposed Tysabri Percentage). Elan and Biogen have not disclosed what they believe this percentage to be, but it may be estimated on the basis of projected cash flows accruing to Elan from the Pre-Restructuring Tysabri Participation (before the completion of the Tysabri Transaction) and the residual Tysabri Royalty (after the completion of the Tysabri Transaction).

Royalty Pharma has prepared an illustrative calculation which assumes that the Disposed Tysabri Percentage is between 46 percent and 54 percent (the Disposed Tysabri Percentage Range). This illustrative calculation was prepared solely based upon Royalty Pharma's analysis of the terms of the Tysabri Transaction and publicly available forecasts for Tysabri. Biogen paid US$3.25 billion for the Disposed Tysabri Interest.

Based on the Disposed Tysabri Percentage Range and Royalty Pharma's assumptions, the Tysabri Transaction ascribed a value of between US$2.77 billion and US$3.81 billion to the residual Tysabri Royalty. Using the mid-point of the Disposed Tysabri Percentage Range of 50 percent would indicate that the Tysabri Transaction ascribed a value of US$3.25 billion to the residual Tysabri Royalty. The Proposal Enterprise Value of US$3.56 billion¹⁸ represents a 9.6 percent premium to this value.

¹⁵ Based on broker notes released after the announcement of the Tysabri Transaction and prior to February 25, 2013.

¹⁶ Comments made in notes by Berenberg Bank, Davy, Deutsche Bank, Exane BNP Paribas, Leerink Swann, Morgan Stanley, RBC Capital Markets and UBS released after the announcement of the Tysabri Transaction and prior to February 25, 2013.

¹⁷ Comments made in notes by Leerink Swann, RBC Capital Markets and UBS released after the announcement of the Tysabri Transaction and prior to February 25, 2013.

¹⁸ Calculated in Appendix VI.

In its calculations above, Royalty Pharma makes no adjustment for the value of synergies that may be realized by Biogen. Biogen has stated that its annual operating synergies from the Tysabri Transaction will be approximately US$30 million¹⁹. No other buyer could have realized such synergies and no further similar synergies are now available.

Royalty Pharma believes that these synergies can be viewed as reducing the effective net cost to Biogen. As such, Royalty Pharma believes that its calculation may over-state the value ascribed by the Tysabri Transaction to the standalone value of the Disposed Tysabri Interest, and by implication may over-state the value of the residual Tysabri Royalty.

In its calculation, Royalty Pharma ascribes minimal value to Elan's non-cash assets other than to the residual Tysabri Royalty. The Proposal Enterprise Value therefore closely reflects the value that Royalty Pharma is ascribing to the Tysabri Royalty.

Royalty Pharma's calculation framework, analysis and assumptions, derived from publicly available information, are contained in Appendix IV.

Elan will have little or no strategic value following the Tysabri Transaction

Following the completion of the Tysabri Transaction, Royalty Pharma believes that the field of likely acquirors of Elan will have narrowed sharply.

Royalty Pharma does not believe that pharmaceutical or biotech companies would be interested in acquiring Elan given that its material assets (in the context of the assets of the Elan Group, taken as a whole), following the completion of the Tysabri Transaction, will consist of cash and the Tysabri Royalty. As such, Royalty Pharma believes that the only companies that would be interested in acquiring Elan would be financial buyers. As the world's largest investor in pharmaceutical royalties, Royalty Pharma believes that it may be the only credible buyer capable of acquiring the whole of Elan.

Conclusion: the choice for Elan Shareholders is clear

Royalty Pharma's Proposal provides a clear choice for Elan Shareholders:

Receive what Royalty Pharma believes is the full value for Elan Stock now, in cash; or Trust that Elan's acquisition strategy will succeed by remaining invested in a company with two material assets: a royalty interest in Tysabri and cash, the majority of which Elan has stated will be used for acquisitions.

IF ELAN SHAREHOLDERS SUPPORT THE ROYALTY PHARMA PROPOSAL, THEN THEY SHOULD ENCOURAGE THE BOARD OF ELAN TO ENGAGE WITH ROYALTY PHARMA.

¹⁹ Sourced from the Biogen presentation made to investors on February 6, 2013 which states on slide 13 that Asset Purchase Structure Enables: Approximately US$30M in annual operating synergies relatively seamlessly .

ELAN SHAREHOLDERS MAY NEVER GET ANOTHER OPPORTUNITY TO MAKE THIS CHOICE.

APPENDIX IV:

Basis for statement about value of Tysabri Royalty implied by the Tysabri Transaction

An estimate of the value of the Tysabri Royalty implied by the Tysabri Transaction can be calculated principally by making assumptions around the percentage of the economic value of the Pre-Restructuring Tysabri Participation acquired by Biogen in the Tysabri Transaction, through which it acquired the Disposed Tysabri Interest (the percentage being the Disposed Tysabri Percentage).

Based on an assumed value for the Disposed Tysabri Interest, one can infer the value of the Tysabri Royalty. Based on an assumed value for the Tysabri Royalty, it is also possible to infer an enterprise valuation for Elan as a whole by making an assumption about the value of Elan's other non-cash assets and attributes. Royalty Pharma ascribes minimal value to these other assets as discussed elsewhere in this announcement.

Assumption on Disposed Tysabri Percentage

The Disposed Tysabri Percentage can be estimated by comparing, on an annual basis, forecasts for the profit that would have accrued to Elan under the Pre-Restructuring Tysabri Participation (before the Tysabri Transaction) and the profit that will accrue to Elan under the residual Tysabri Royalty (following the Tysabri Transaction).

Royalty Pharma has prepared an illustrative calculation which assumes that the Disposed Tysabri Percentage is between 46 percent and 54 percent (the Disposed Tysabri Percentage Range). This illustrative calculation was prepared solely based upon Royalty Pharma's analysis of the terms of the Tysabri Transaction and publicly available forecasts for Tysabri. Biogen paid US$3.25 billion for the Disposed Tysabri Interest.

Elan or Biogen have not disclosed what they believe the relevant percentage to be. In the event that the calculation below were undertaken assuming that Biogen will acquire a higher or lower percentage of the Pre-Restructuring Tysabri Royalty, the effect would be to increase or decrease the implied premia calculated in Table 1 respectively.

Assumption on synergies

In its calculations, Royalty Pharma makes no adjustment for the value of synergies that may be realized by Biogen. Biogen has stated that its annual operating synergies from the Tysabri Transaction will be approximately US$30 million²¹. No other buyer could have realized such synergies and no further similar synergies are now available.

Royalty Pharma believes that these synergies can be viewed as reducing the effective net cost to Biogen. As such, Royalty Pharma believes that its calculation may over-state the value ascribed by the Tysabri Transaction to the standalone value of the Disposed Tysabri Interest, and by implication may over-state the value of the residual Tysabri Royalty.

In the event that the calculation below ascribed a value to Biogen's synergies, the effect would be to increase the implied premia set out in Table 1.

²¹ Sourced from the Biogen presentation made to investors on February 6, 2013 which states on slide 13 that Asset Purchase Structure Enables: Approximately US$30M in annual operating synergies relatively seamlessly

Assumption on Elan's other non-cash assets

As discussed elsewhere in this announcement, Royalty Pharma ascribes minimal value to Elan's non-cash assets other than to the residual Tysabri Royalty, and the Proposal Enterprise Value therefore closely reflects the value that Royalty Pharma is ascribing to the residual Tysabri Royalty.

In the event that the calculation below ascribed a higher value to Elan's non-cash assets other than the residual Tysabri Royalty, the effect would be to decrease the implied premia calculated in Table 1.

Calculation of implied value of Elan's residual Tysabri Royalty

Based on the assumptions above, the table below calculates the implied value of Elan's residual Tysabri Royalty and sets out how this value compares with the Proposal Enterprise Value.

Using a mid-point of the Disposed Tysabri Percentage Range of 50 percent would indicate that the Tysabri Transaction ascribed a value of US$3.25 billion to the residual Tysabri Royalty. The Proposal Enterprise Value of US$3.56 billion represents a 9.6 percent premium to this value.

This is despite the fact that Royalty Pharma would not gain control of Tysabri through an acquisition of Elan, and the fact that the tiered Tysabri Royalty structure allocates more value to Biogen on the lower risk cash flows accruing from Tysabri (the first US$2 billion of annual sales from the drug) and makes the value accruing to Elan more dependent on the higher risk cash flows (the incremental annual sales from the drug above US$2 billion).

| Disposed Tysabri Percentage | 46% | 48% | 50% | 52% | 54% |
