Conducting Business and Interacting with Level 3

As a CenturyLink employee, you may get inquiries about the Level 3 acquisition from a variety of sources. How you respond to these questions is important. Below are some guidelines to keep in mind when responding. Please take a few minutes to familiarize yourself with this information.

General Business Operations

It is important that CenturyLink and Level 3 continue to operate as two distinct and independent companies until the transaction closes. We understand that employees from both companies are excited about the future. But we must not jump the gun and begin combining our business with Level 3. Unless you are working on obtaining regulatory clearances or involved in the integration planning process, the rules are simple: we interact at arm's length, avoiding conversations about business strategy, current projects, processes, customers, or any other confidential business information. If you are involved in regulatory or integration planning, then be sure to check with your Legal team for specific guidance.

A good way to check your actions is to ask the questions, "Would I say or do this if the merger weren't happening?"

Conducting business with vendors, suppliers and other external parties (business associates)

So much of what we do each day involves interacting with business associates outside the company. It is natural that you will get questions about how the merger is affecting current business operations and decisions. The information you provide to outside sources can have consequences for both CenturyLink and the individuals involved.

Therefore, please focus on maintaining a business as usual approach with our vendors, suppliers, and other business associates. A few guiding principles include:

Until the transaction has closed, you speak only for CenturyLink and not for Level 3 or the future company.

If you are involved in vendor, supplier and business associate contract decisions and/or negotiations, please work with our Legal team in advance of any contact or discussion involving any post-merger business.

Protecting Confidential Information

Continue to protect confidential or sensitive information including business opportunities, customer-specific information, and non-public price information and marketing plans. Until the merger is final, these need to be kept strictly confidential.

If you have any questions, please take the time to seek legal guidance from CenturyLink Senior Counsel Sean Lindsay at sean.lindsay@centurylink.com, or 303.992.5875

CenturyLink / Level 3 Merger Website Launched

We are excited to officially announce the launch of our external CenturyLink / Level 3 merger website, ConnectingTheNewEconomy.com.

The website went live during the holidays and provides information about the transaction, the value it will bring to customers, and up-to-date progress on the merger. While the primary target audience for this website is policy makers, it also provides helpful information to investors, customers and employees.

Please take time to visit the site to learn more about our merger activities.

Updates on State, Federal and International Regulatory Filings

As previously communicated, certain international, federal and state regulatory approvals, as well as approval from both companies' shareholders, must be received before the CenturyLink/Level 3 transaction can be completed. CenturyLink and Level 3 continue to make good progress toward meeting the regulatory requirements to create a more competitive global enterprise network service provider.

Federal and International Regulatory filings

Federal Communications Commission (FCC) application: FCC supplemental comments and petitions are due on January 23, 2017 for the previously filed Domestic 214 Application for Transfer of Control and International 214 Application for Transfer of Control. Reply comments and oppositions are due Feb 7, 2017.

Hart-Scott-Rodino Act (HSR) filing: Pre-merger notification under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act pulled and refiled. This pull and re-file process is a common procedure used by applicants to provide additional time for antitrust review of complex transactions.

International filings: We are preparing to make required filings in the UK and Mexico by mid-February.
State filings

Prior to year end 2016, state filings were made in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Nebraska, Minnesota, Utah, Alaska, Hawaii and Nevada. Filings for New York and New Mexico were completed on January 6, 2017.

We expect to file the necessary applications, forms or notifications in 18 additional states by the end of January.
