CVS PLEASSED WITH CAREMARK'S REJECTION OF EXPRESS SCRIPTS' HIGHLY CONDITIONAL, UNSOLICITED OFFER

CVS/Caremark Merger Expected to Close in the First Quarter of 2007

WOONSOCKET, RI, January 8, 2007 □ In response to the decision announced by the Board of Directors of Caremark Rx, Inc. (NYSE: CMX) relating to Express Scripts' (NYSE: ESRX) unsolicited offer, CVS Corporation (NYSE: CVS) issued the following statement:

□We are pleased with the decision of the Caremark board to reaffirm its commitment to the merger of CVS and Caremark and we look forward to closing our transaction during the first quarter of 2007,□ said Tom Ryan, Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer of CVS. □With the FTC antitrust waiting period already expired and our joint proxy statement on file at the SEC, we remain firmly committed to completing our combination and passing along the many benefits to shareholders, employers, plan sponsors and consumers as soon as possible.□

CVS noted the following:

The merger of CVS and Caremark offers a clear path and substantially more certainty to close.

The Express Scripts offer is highly conditional. Specifically, the Express Scripts offer, which would reduce the number of major competitors in the PBM industry from 3 to 2, carries significant antitrust risk that could well prevent it from ever being approved and, at a minimum, would substantially delay closing of the transaction, with adverse consequences. In contrast, the antitrust waiting period for the CVS/Caremark transaction has already expired without a second request, and the proxy statement is already on file with the SEC. The planned first quarter closing will enable the merged CVS/Caremark to quickly begin to offer benefits to shareholders, employers, plan sponsors and consumers.

A combined Express Scripts/Caremark would likely result in substantial customer defections and diminished value, particularly in light of the high degree of leverage.

Caremark has expressed its deep concern about key customer defections in the event of a combination with Express Scripts. The loss of key customers presents an unacceptable risk to shareholders, particularly in light of the leverage profile of a combined Caremark/Express Scripts. This should be of concern to Caremark shareholders, who would own 57% of the combined company. Express Scripts has also made unsubstantiated claims about synergies, which could be substantially revised following due diligence. In contrast, CVS has had the opportunity to conduct extensive due diligence and integration planning and now conservatively estimates a minimum of $500 million in pre-tax cost synergies.

CVS/Caremark will offer fully integrated products and services that will accelerate revenue growth.

The CVS/Caremark combination will provide significant opportunities to drive incremental revenues that only a leading drugstore/PBM combination can achieve. Payors and consumers have been seeking new ways to control costs, reduce complexity, and improve health outcomes. Trends affecting the healthcare industry, including an aging population, the trend toward consumer driven healthcare, the need for greater compliance with prescribed drug therapies, the increasing use of high cost specialty drugs and the increasing need for tailored disease management programs, all require new products and services that can be more effectively delivered by the fully integrated CVS/Caremark.

CVS/Caremark offers substantially greater shareholder value than the highly conditional Express Scripts[®] offer.

The vertical integration of CVS/Caremark will enable the new company to develop and offer unique products and services that will reduce costs, improve outcomes, accelerate revenue growth and create substantial shareholder value. In addition, CVS and Caremark expect the combination to be accretive to EPS in the first full year after close and increasingly accretive thereafter. With the very significant free cash flow generation capabilities of the combined company, as well as the strength of the post-merger balance sheet, CVS/Caremark will be well positioned to capitalize on strategic opportunities and enhance total return to shareholders through significant common share repurchases and dividends.

CVS/Caremark shareholders will benefit from the highly skilled Caremark management team.

The CVS/Caremark merger of equals will enable CVS/Caremark shareholders to benefit from having the Caremark management team run the combined PBM business. At the same time, a new team comprised of both CVS and Caremark will be transforming the delivery of pharmacy products and services to this changing marketplace. This is a relationship business and one of the best attributes of the combined company will be the strength of the management teams, which will stay in place.

CVS and Caremark have extensive experience in integrating large-scale acquisitions, while Express Scripts has never integrated an acquisition of this size.

CVS has a long and successful track record of executing successful integrations, including Osco/Sav-on, Eckerd, Revco and Arbor. Caremark has successfully integrated the largest PBM acquisition ever with its purchase of AdvancePCS. In the CVS/Caremark merger, Caremark will be integrating CVS[®] $3 billion revenue PBM, PharmaCare, into Caremark, a far more manageable undertaking than their previous successful integration.
