A few minutes ago we announced that Oracle plans to acquire ATG for approximately $1 billion, as well as strong Q3 financial results. We will have a company-wide town hall meeting to discuss this at 11:30 a.m. EDT, but I would like to share a few thoughts with all of you in advance.

Joining forces with Oracle gives us access to deep ERP, CRM and technology platform assets as well as greater global resources in engineering, sales, marketing, services, and partner channels. While ATG has been very successful operating as an independent company, I believe the opportunity to combine our capabilities with Oracle is the best path to realize our vision and to offer the kind of integrated, industry-leading solutions our global customers need. Speaking of that success, we were thrilled with our Q3 financial performance that was also just announced today. In Q3 we had very strong bookings (a 37% increase over Q3 of 2009) along with solid revenue and profit performance. Our balance sheet is very strong we have no debt and ended Q3 with over $180M of cash, cash equivalents & marketable securities, a record level for ATG.

As we have often communicated, there are several significant drivers in the commerce industry. An increasingly significant driver is the need for integrating commerce activities across channels web, store, call center, social, mobile & more. Increasingly we are seeing organizations across many industries looking for a unified cross-channel commerce and customer relationship management platform to drive a cohesive experience across all commerce channels. Another big driver we see in our business is the need for scale and coverage to operate on a global basis across multiple countries, verticals and with a full range of B2C & B2B capabilities. The best possible company that we could unite with to execute on this shared vision is Oracle. Oracle and ATG combined will have the strongest product offerings, innovation track record, and domain expertise.

Until the merger is actually closed, ATG will continue to operate as an independent company. While I realize this announcement will generate a lot of interest and discussion, we need to continue to focus on winning in the market and satisfying our customers.

I look forward to our discussion later this morning. Thomas Kurian, EVP of Product Development at Oracle, Bob Weiler, EVP of Oracle's Global Business Units (and formerly CEO of Phase Forward another Boston area company that Oracle recently acquired), Anthony Lye, SVP, Oracle CRM, Vishal Bhagwati, VP, Oracle Corporate Development, and Stefanie Wittner, HR Manager, Oracle, will be joining us for the meeting.

Bob
