BROADWING HOLDS INVESTOR CALL
RECONFIRMS COMPANY'S FINANCIAL STRENGTH

CINCINNATI - May 31, 2002 - Broadwing Inc. (NYSE: BRW) held a conference with investors on Thursday, May 30, 2002, in order to clarify some misconceptions, misunderstandings, and misleading information that had been reported in the investment community.

Broadwing Inc. Chairman and CEO, Rick Ellenberger, also outlined several aspects of the Company that differentiate it from others in the telecommunications industry, and he reaffirmed the Company's 2002 financial guidance, including its objective of becoming free cash flow positive by year-end 2002.

Specifically, the Company reviewed:

- Its financial and operational performance for the first quarter
- The stability and performance of its Cincinnati Bell businesses
- Its nationwide business enterprise market traction and momentum
- The requirements and specific calculations for each of its four bank debt covenants
- Its compliance with SEC approved IRU accounting practices
- The business reasons for and bankruptcy court approval of a renegotiated agreement with one of its customers
- The timing and size of its debt maturities and refinancing opportunities
- Its guidance for 2002 for revenue, EBITDA, capital and achieving a free cash flow positive position by the end of the year.

In conjunction with the call, the Company made available, on its website, presentation materials, including a document outlining the specific requirements, definitions and calculations for each of its four bank debt covenants.

The complete recorded call, including the questions and answer session, as well as the supporting materials are available on the Company's website at www.broadwing.com. The material may be accessed by clicking on the Corporate Information tab, then the Investors tab, and finally the Conference Calls & Presentations tab.
